Australian working conditions

Overseas workers – know your workplace rights

Pay rates and workplace conditions are set by Australian law. All people working in Australia, including those from overseas, have rights and protections at work. These cannot be taken away by contracts or agreements.

If you have questions about your pay and conditions while in Australia, you can contact the Fair Work Ombudsman for free help.

Visit www.fairwork.gov.au for information for visa holders and international students. This includes information in 27 languages. There is also a range of helpful videos, in many languages, about working in Australia at www.youtube.com/fairworkgovau

You can also contact the Fair Work Ombudsman by phone within Australia on 13 13 94 (Translating and Interpreting Service 13 14 50).

The Fair Work Information Statement which is available in 27 languages also provides important information, www.fairwork.gov.au/employee-entitlements/national-employment-standards/fair-work-information-statement

What are your minimum rights and conditions at work?

Pay and minimum wage rate

Your minimum pay rate can come from an award, enterprise agreement or other registered agreement, or the national minimum wage. The national minimum wage is reviewed every year and may change. The current national minimum wage Fact sheet can be found at www.fairwork.gov.au/how-we-will-help/templates-and-guides/fact-sheets/minimum-workplace-entitlements/minimum-wages

Employees have to be paid the right pay rate for all hours they work, including time spent:

- training;
- in team meetings;
- opening and closing the business;
- doing a trial shift.

Casual employees also receive a casual loading of at least 25% on the base rate.

You can calculate your correct pay and entitlements using the 'Pay Calculator' at

<https://calculate.fairwork.gov.au/findyouraward>

What is not okay at work?

Every employee has protections at work. You should not be bullied or harassed and you should not be discriminated against. It is okay to ask your boss, the Fair Work Ombudsman or someone else about your pay and conditions.

You can find more information about discrimination, bullying, harassment and protections at work at www.fairwork.gov.au/employee-entitlements/protections-at-work

Helpful hints when you start working in Australia

Keep a diary of days and hours worked.

Keep copies or records of employment details, pay slips, agreements and superannuation and tax documents.

Remember there are always government contacts that can help you if you get stuck.

Can I get into trouble for talking to the Fair Work Ombudsman?

No. Your employer can't treat you differently, terminate your employment or take away your entitlements for talking to the Fair Work Ombudsman.

Can my employer cancel my visa?

No. Employers cannot cancel visas. Only the Department of Immigration and Border Protection (the Department) can grant, refuse or cancel visas.

Volunteer work and pay slips

Commencing on 1 December 2015, volunteer work activities will no longer count towards eligibility for a second Working Holiday visa, and cannot be claimed as specified work.

All specified work performed from 1 December 2015 onwards will need to have been paid in accordance with Australian workplace law. This will be checked when you apply. You will need to provide copies of your pay slips with your application covering any specified work performed from 1 December 2015 onwards.

All Australian employers are legally obligated to provide employees with pay slips for any work they undertake. Pay slips cannot be withheld by an employer – employers who do so are breaking Australian law.

What if I did volunteer work before 1 December 2015 but want to apply after this date?

Any volunteer work you performed prior to 1 December 2015 will still be eligible to claim as specified work, even if you apply after this date. The change, including the need to provide pay slips, only applies to work performed from 1 December 2015 onwards.
